

2025 IHCF Medical Mission Seminar Exhibitor Information

The 2025 IHCF Medical Missions Seminar is getting close—I'm excited!

I'm Jon DeShazo. The seminar is held at my home church, and I've recorded the sessions for the last couple of years. You got this e-mail because you signed up for an exhibitor space at the seminar. I want to give you a brief view of the exhibitor space.

We appreciate the work that you are doing and the opportunities to serve that you've given so many over the years, and we want to do our best to engage a broad audience to help connect you to the future of medical-related missions, both short term and long term.

Here's a view of the space from last year (during early setup). It's a bright, airy space that's still pretty cozy. The tables are 6-8 feet long, and we will offer power around the glass walls. Placement is first come, first served.

Registration opens at 10, but if you are here early, we'll be around. Just go to the registration and one of the volunteers will help you over to the atrium.

Snacks and dinners will be available in the atrium near your spaces. The exhibits surround a lot of tables and chairs for conversation and snacking.

We want every attendee to think about places they can serve and who they can talk as they start planning their mission opportunities.

Please send us 1-2 slides that we can display on screens around the building as well as screens before and after sessions. We would like you to:

- describe your mission and where you serve
- Tell us who or what you need, when: for example, if you are hosting mission teams, tell us what kind of resources you need and when you need them during the next year.

Also, if you have one, feel free to send me a link of a short mission promo video you'd like us to run at regular intervals on some of the screens (with subtitles if possible).

We will need these slides and videos two days before the seminar starts to get them set up with our signage and other content.

Thanks!
